Banning Lead Ammunition for Deer and Bear

The Bald Eagle has no natural predators. The bald eagle is an opportunistic feeder which subsists mainly on fish. Their biggest enemy is humans. Some of the causes of Bald Eagle mortality include collisions with cars and power lines, electrocution, gunshot wounds and chemical poisoning.

Poisoning can be anything from mercury, phenobarbital (vets use for euthanizing pets), lead, and copper. All can be found in the environment.

Bald eagles are opportunistic foragers but prefer fish as their primary food and are found in great densities where fish are abundant. They also eat sea birds and ducks or hunt over grasslands and marshes for small mammals such as rabbits, and squirrels. Bald Eagles nest near water to hunt fish and water birds. And their nesting territories range from 2 and 1/2 square miles to as large as 15 square miles, depending on how much food there is.

Behind fish, the next most significant prey base for bald eagles are other water fowl. The contribution of such birds to the eagle's diet is variable, depending on the quantity and availability of fish near the water's surface. Water fowl can seasonally comprise from 7% to 80% of the prey selection for eagles in certain localities that have large bodies of water.

Mammal preys are generally less frequently taken than fish or water fowl. However, in some regions, such as landlocked areas of North America, wintering bald eagles may become habitual predators of medium-sized mammals. Bald eagles often hunt in pair to catch rabbits. They can attack and prey on rabbits and hares of nearly any size.

My question has always been where are the numbers that support a ban on lead?

Do eagles found dead on the reservation only live and forage here?

How can we tell if they are poisoned on the reservation or on land bordering the reservation?

Is the state looking to ban lead ammunition for deer and bear hunting? Wouldn't they decide based on statistical information?

I believe we need to protect wildlife, but I want to see the numbers and facts before backing any decision that affects our community.

Gabel. “Their initiative and dedication to the greater good continue the tradition of student empowerment at the University, reflecting our values and commitment to inspire every student to meet the great challenges facing our state, our nation and our society.”

Joleece has been awarded a Udall Scholarship by the Udall Foundation, an elite nationally competitive award for students committed to public service in either Environmental or Native American affairs. The U of M-Twin Cities campus has now had ten Udall Scholars, the most recent four all being Native American students.

Joleece Pecore is an Art and American Indian Studies major from Stevens Point, Wisconsin. She is a member of the Ho Chunk Nation and also has heritage in the Stockbridge-Munsee Band of Mohicans. Former president of the Ho-Chunk Nation, Jon Greendeer, credits her with a long record of unconditional volunteerism, devoting her wide range of talents to a variety of causes across Indian Country, including rallies in support of the Indian Child Welfare Act and public service media regarding pandemic health protocols.

As an artist and organizer, Pecore has orchestrated cultural events within and across Native communities. On campus she has been a leader of the American Indian Cultural Center and Circle of Indigenous Nations, working with Dakota and Ojibwe students to organize the Spring Powwow and creating communications systems to maintain and build community during the COVID-19 pandemic. Pecore plans to complete a law degree with a concentration in Indian Law and represent the interests of Indigenous communities, especially around issues of natural resources, legal jurisdiction, and historic rights and treaties.

In researching information about Joleece, we found the following article written by Laura Johnson from: <https://cla.umn.edu/news-events/profile/joleece-pecore-artist-scholar-advocate>

What inspired you to pursue art and American Indian studies majors?

I knew that I wanted to major in American Indian studies in high school. I knew that I wanted to learn more about American Indian history and how that history shapes contemporary issues for Natives. But art has always been a big part of my life, too. I have artists on both sides of my family. So I considered minoring in art, but just knowing that I was going to be taking a lot of those classes, it made sense to become an art major. I don't consider myself very outspoken or extroverted, so I use my art to advocate for myself.

Before coming to the U, I did mostly traditional paintings and drawings. Through the art department, I've learned about digital drawing, different ways to make paintings, and how to make films. A film course inspired me to make films that were centered around Natives—to create films from a Native perspective and show contemporary and authentic representations of us.

My film Reel NDNS won me second place at the University of Minnesota Film Festival and recognition in a couple other film festivals. The first half of the film is about what I believe non-Natives see: a connection to nature, stereotypical images of dreamcatchers and hunting, seeing us as forms of entertainment and almost mythical.

The second half is about authentic and contemporary images of Natives through my family: we're humans, we're people. I filmed it during hunting season in Wisconsin, and one of my favorite parts shows my brothers learning to cut up a deer but just standing and looking at it for a while. It shows that we're not mythical, we're just people operating within this society. We adapt, we're contemporary. We're not just an old black-and-white image. My art is fueled by Native issues and my identity. I see that there are inaccurate representations of Natives and I'm trying to change that narrative.

What activities are you involved in?

I came to the U in 2020 so my first year was entirely online and I didn't get to be as involved that much, but I did live in the American Indian Culture House and through that opportunity, met a couple of other first-year Native students.

Since then, I've become involved working as an intern with the Circle of Indigenous Nations and serving as a co-president of the American Indian Student Cultural Center. These organizations are really about building community—welcoming newly admitted and transfer Native students to campus and helping them feel more acclimated right away, hosting cultural and community events including weekly study nights and monthly Frybread Fridays. In the fall, the AISCC hosted a round dance and we just wrapped up with our spring powwow held at Maturi Pavilion.

Talk about the Truman Scholar application process.

I learned about the process from Timothy Jones, associate director of national and international scholarships, as I was applying for a Udall Scholarship. I had to write several essays about myself, where I want to go for graduate school, what I intend to study, and what I plan to do in the future after earning my graduate degree. I also had to ask people for letters of recommendation that spoke to my capabilities as a leader. And I had to be nominated by the University.

When I found out I was selected for the final interview process, I participated in an all-day interview event in St. Paul. One thing that I try to do is show my pride for my identity and show that Native Americans are still here, Native people are still thriving. So as part of my attire, I Indigenized my clothing and dressed in a ribbon skirt and beaded necklaces.

Afterward, I was so self-conscious of how I did and spent a week or two just analyzing my responses. But then Timothy Jones contacted me and said, “You're going to get a call later today from a phone number you don't know, you should answer it.” And President Joan Gabel called to deliver the good news. I was in shock, my mind was in so many different places, but I was really happy and told all of my friends and family right away.

When did you become interested in public service? My family has shaped me a lot. My dad is a historian and I have a couple of family members who were a part of the tribal council for the Stockbridge-Munsee Band of Mohicans. My uncle used to be a tribal judge for that nation, and when I really started thinking about what more I could do with my degree, he told me that the best thing I could do for Indian Country is become a lawyer.

Originally, I didn't really see myself as a lawyer, but over time, I've learned that I am capable of being more

Tribal Sun Soap - Our Story

By the Zack Family

Tribal Sun Soap evolved from a personal need to find a natural soap that would help my dry skin condition. We wanted a soap that used more natural ingredients and less manufactured chemicals that were better for our skin, our health, and the environment.

After much research, we came across a family-owned company in Indiana that started making cold process soap in 2002. After trying their soap, we could not be more satisfied and felt their soap was superior to the other natural soaps and worked to create a partnership and offer their soaps under the Tribal Sun Products, LLC label. In January of this year 2023 Tribal Sun Soap was launched to the public.

Along with our on line website: Tribal-Sun-Soap.square.site, we are excited to offer these luxury handmade soaps in North Star Casino Giftshop and our Sweetgrass scent is now offered to each guest staying in the hotel.

Our logo

When our family first discussed having a business, the first thing we started to discuss was the name and a logo for our brand. Being Indigenous, we wanted a name and logo that would reflect our heritage. Mohican Artist Terri (Miller) O' Connor was the first person we thought of to help design our logo. Terri has been creating art for our family for many years that includes a painting of our family's journey and designing an inspired Mohican Tattoo on my left arm. Her husband even helped tweak our name to what it is today.

What is Cold Process Soap

Cold process soap making allows the soap to produce exceptional scents and high performance. The longer period required for the soap to dry out allows the pH to slowly decrease as it hardens and as soap crystals form.

Cold process soap is better for the environment

Cold process soap is minimally processed, meaning there is no need to crank up the temperature to cook out water and release unnecessary carbon dioxide. Cold process soap making aligns with Tribal Sun Soaps commitment to reducing Carbon emissions.

Our Commitment to helping other Indigenous Causes

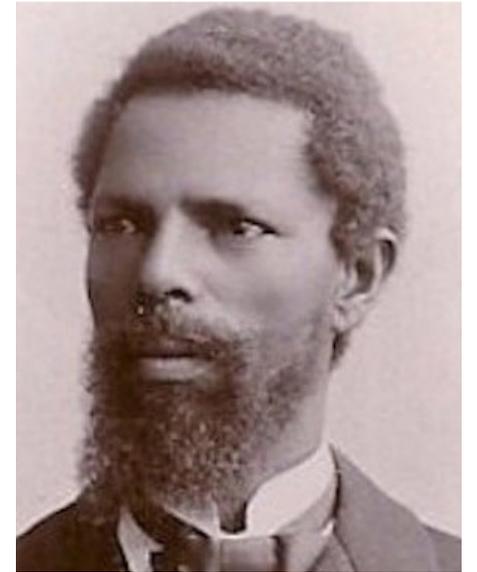

It was important for our family to help give back to Indigenous causes. A portion of sales goes to these causes.

Who Is Onesimus?

BY Kimberlee Wyche Etheridge

An enslaved African, Onesimus helped to save hundreds of Bostonians from smallpox in 1721. Left out of the history books, he taught others about the practice of inoculation, which was common in Africa and Asia long before vaccines were established. He explained that taking the pus from an infected individual's pustule and inserting it into the broken skin of a healthy person, led to that person being immune from future infections—a true public health breakthrough in containing a ravenous infectious disease. Cotton Mather, Onesimus's enslaver, and Zabdiel Boylston, a physician, got the credit and have been cited in history as bringing the lifesaving technique to the American colonies. We have come a long way with immunizations. Now universal in the United States, all children regardless of their family's ability to pay, have access to the lifesaving shots that are based on this little-known historical figure, Onesimus.

Currently we are partnered with Waking Women Healing Institute WWW.Wakingwomenhealingint.org and later this Summer will be working with Bree's Closet brees_closet@yahoo.com Facebook page: Bree's Closet.

Our family has really enjoyed working on the business, our 10 year old helps with imaging and graphics, our 6 year old tells us the soaps he likes and does not! Kids are always honest. My wife Michelle helps with budgets and other financials. Our nephew Marcus has been a huge help with his sales background, he is always available as a sounding board and is not afraid to get "clean" and help package and ship soap out for bigger orders, and we all enjoy working on the different scents and names of our soaps.

We are very excited to offer a first time ever Pop-Up Sale Event in Shawano Friday May 26 and Saturday May 27 at 1013 East Robin Lane, close to the High School. We are selling One off scents, retiring scents and new scents being tested and even a few from our website at lower cost. We will even have some bath bombs for sale.

The choices are diverse with scents and exfoliation levels to meet every ones needs. New scents will rotate, and favorites will stay.

Our family loves working on Tribal Sun Soap and we hope you enjoy it as much as we do!

ARE YOU AT RISK FOR HEPATITIS?

Hepatitis is inflammation of the liver. The liver is a vital organ that processes nutrients, filters the blood, and fights infections. When the liver is inflamed or damaged, its function may be affected. Hepatitis can be caused by heavy alcohol use, toxins, some medications, and certain medical conditions. However, hepatitis is often caused by a virus.

Many people with hepatitis do not have symptoms and do not know they are infected.

ABOUT HEPATITIS INFECTIONS

Hepatitis A- this is spread by the “fecal-oral route.” That means somebody or something contaminated by feces contaminating food. It can also be spread sexually. Cleanliness is important in preventing its spread. There is a vaccine available.

Hepatitis B- this is spread by blood contact. It can be spread through sharing of needles (such as used for illegal drugs or diabetes medicines) or razors. It can also be spread sexually. Avoiding drugs, using only clean needles if you do use drugs, and hygiene are important in preventing its spread. There is a vaccine available.

Hepatitis C- This is spread in ways similar to hepatitis B. There is no vaccine available.

Hepatitis Vaccines

Certain people are at higher risk and providers will be more likely to urge these patients to get hepatitis vaccines, but anybody can get a hepatitis A or B vaccine if they are interested. Children are routinely vaccinated against both A and B. We recommend everyone get vaccinated against both hepatitis A and B. You never know when there can be an outbreak, and also it’s important if you like to travel. In other countries, hepatitis B is more common than in the United States and it is actually the number one cause of liver cancer abroad.

Pecore cont from pg Six: confident and becoming a leader. Before coming to the U, I wasn't really involved in a lot, mostly just sports. So, I brought that—teamwork and work ethic—with me to the U along with my passion for helping my people and community. Through becoming more involved, I've found that I was able to feel more confident in myself and bring what I've learned into my family and community. After I graduate, I'm looking at programs at the University of Arizona, the University of New Mexico, and the University of Kansas to get a JD focusing on Indian Law. Eventually, I hope to practice in Wisconsin, where I'm from and where I'm most familiar with many nations that live there. What does a liberal arts education mean to you? I'm passionate about Native history and how much it affects today regarding contemporary Native issues. I don't think a lot of people understand just how much United States history impacts what's happening today—how we operate as a society, how we treat one another. So much of our current events are shaped by settler colonialism. For me, it's important to study our histories so we can better understand and address what's happening today.
